Version 1.2
April 17, 2012

Overall Notes:

These redlines are meant ot outline elements in a design language, innteded to be scaled out to pages sitewide where needed. We have tried to standardize elements as much as possible, but there are occasions where variations were needed.

Coding Notes:

Fonts:
The designs here are meant to utilize @fontface Webfonts and websafe system fonts. Some will have be licensed as well as self hosted:

CSS3 and hacks for IE7 and IE8:
We tried to use the least amount of non-supported CSS3, and the only ones (we think) we used should be possible to get to work with some slight javascript: 'Box-shadow', 'text-shadow' and 'border-radius'. There are ways to get the shadow to work- Try (http://fetchak.com/ie-css3/) and (http://www.useragentman.com/blog/2011/06/29/full-css3-text-shadows-even-in-ie/) for reference. If all else faisl or you run out of time, its ok to have the rounded corners and shadows just not show up in IE7 and IE8-(which are about 14% of web-browser users combined.)

We chose to use basic CSS for these redlines, as it seems the most direct way to express key design elements in a way that hopefully won't need much translation. If when putting this site togther that some of these specifics are confusing, off or not work-ing, please don't hesitate to contact us for clarification or alternate solutions. Thanks!
